The Department of Languages and Linguistics is dedicated to cultivating a deep understanding and appreciation of the diverse forms and functions of human language. We are committed to equipping our students with the knowledge and skills necessary to communicate effectively, think critically, and engage as linguistically and culturally informed global citizens.

Our faculty brings a broad spectrum of linguistic expertise and cultural backgrounds. We actively collaborate within and beyond the department, regularly participating in professional conferences and pursuing ongoing development to enhance our teaching, advising, and mentoring.

Students in our program are encouraged to be engaged and reflective learners. They explore linguistic concepts and cultural perspectives through active classroom participation, collaborative projects, peer mentoring, study abroad experiences, and student teaching opportunities.
